EXCISE

DECLASSIFIED

E, Mike and I had dinner with Miss Drown and Nicky tonight, and went fairly early to bed.

When I stopped at the office late this afternoon, I had a call from George Ball in Washington. He is Acting Secretary, in the absence of Dean Rusk at Tokyo.

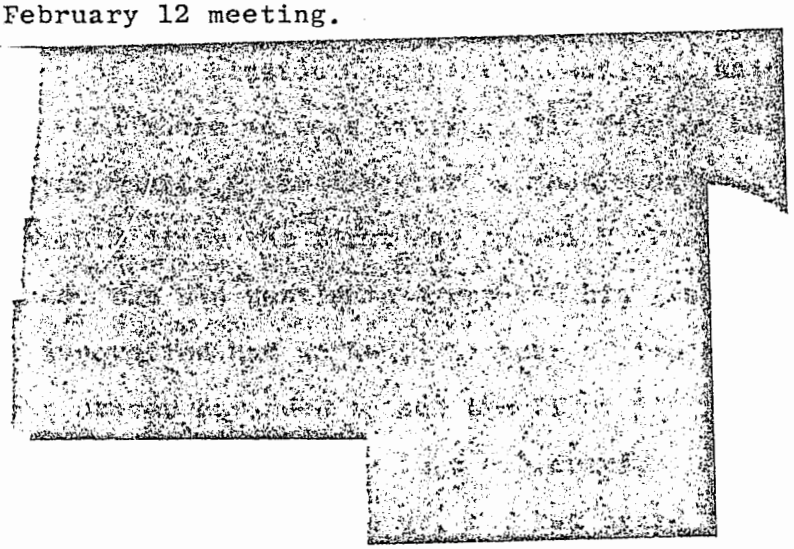
SECRET EXCISE

SECRET

I met the Attorney General, Forrestal, and Armstrong at 10 Downing Street this morning, where we talked with the PM, RAB Butler, and Harold Caccia. We went over ground covered before, but in addition had some discussion about items such as disarmament that might be taken up by the PM with the President at the February 12 meeting.



Home was in great form, and made a most favorable impression on Bobby, who told me afterwards he thought his brother would indoubtedly have become a tremendous friend of the PM if he had lived and met him under such circumstances as Bobby did during his stay here.

We went directly from 10 Downing Street to Stash's house, where a delicious lunch was served to all the members of the Attorney General's party who were about to embark for Washington. E and Ethel were there; the only other woman was Flora Gruson. As I sat down, Jim Tull appeared with a telegram instructing me to see the Greek and Turkish Foreign Ministers this afternoon,
